

Great White Shark

The Great White Shark likes to eat fish, stingrays, sea lions, and seals.

They are a blue-gray color on the tops of their bodies, which helps them blend in with the bottom of the ocean.

These sharks have lots of big teeth! They can have up to 3,000 teeth at one time.

Hammerhead Shark

The Hammerhead shark's name comes from its unusually shaped head.

Its wide head is used to hunt for its favorite meal—stingrays.

It uses its head to trap stingrays against the ocean floor.

Whale Shark

Whale sharks are enormous! They are the largest fish in the world.

They are slow moving, and live for about 70 years.

Despite its huge mouth (about 4 feet wide), the whale shark feeds mostly on plants and plankton. They are harmless to people.

Leopard Shark

The Leopard Shark is small, only growing to about 4-5 feet in length.

They can be scared easily, so it's hard to catch a glimpse before they swim off! They are pretty much harmless to humans.

They are known for their distinctive dark spots and saddle-type markings.

Mako Shark

This is the fastest shark species in the world.

They also love to jump out of the water and can jump really high! (about 25-30 feet)
